- Mark : Yeah, I think so.

- Mark : I don't believe it. My lucky color is yellow!
- Olivia : I know another superstition. Have you ② (that / is / for / unlucky / ever / heard / once / it) the groom to see the bride before the ceremony?
- Mark : Yes, I have. I believe in that one. I'll try not to see you before our wedding ceremony.
- Olivia : Oh, that's so hard for us! I don't think it brings bad luck. I want you to look at me in a beautiful dress before our ceremony.
- Mark : You know my mother told me another superstition. She said the bride shouldn't look in the mirror after leaving for the ceremony. That brings her unluckiness. Do you know about that?
- Olivia : That's very popular. But I think it's too old to believe in.
- Mark : I think so, too. Does that mean looking in a mirror before the bride leaves for the ceremony is good luck?
- Olivia : Maybe there is no superstition like that. I'd like to see myself in the mirror anytime on the wedding day.
- Mark : Anyway we have to think much about some things before our wedding.
- Olivia : I think so. By the way, where should we go on our honeymoon?
- Mark : Well, if we look at the calendar and—oh, no.
- Olivia : What?
- Mark : Our wedding date is June 13th!
- Olivia : Beautiful summer weather.
- Mark : That's a Friday!
- Olivia : So? We don't have to get married on a weekend.

- 4 次の英文は、Leonardo da Vinci(レオナルド＝ダ＝ヴィンチ)の幼少期について書かれたものである。これを読んで、後の各問に答えよ。解答はすべて答の欄に記入せよ。

Leonardo was born on 15 April 1452 near a small town called Vinci. The family name da Vinci just means from Vinci. The town is built on a hill about thirty-five kilometers from Florence, but in 1452 that was a long day's ride by horse. Vinci was a quiet town far away from the great buildings, money, and important people of Florence. Leonardo's mother and father both married different people after he was born. His mother stayed in Vinci, but his father lived and worked in Florence. Leonardo probably spent most of his early life around Vinci. Leonardo knew a lot about life in the country, he played in the fields around the town and he loved animals. Leonardo watched the workers and he learned how people built and made things. He was interested in everything and he soon began to draw.

Leonardo could not go to school with the children of important families because his father and mother were not married. At the time, many books were written in Latin, but because Leonardo did not learn this language at school, he could not read them. Years later, he finally taught himself to read Latin. He had to teach himself other things too, like how to write. He wrote with his left hand and he used (1)mirror writing, which is very difficult to read. When you put a mirror next to his writing, you can read it. He learned to draw with his left hand too. When he was about thirteen, his father took some of his drawings to a friend in Florence—the artist Verrocchio. Verrocchio liked the drawings, and in about 1466, Leonardo became (2)an apprentice (someone who learns new things while he works) in Verrocchio's workshop. Leonardo enjoyed drawing, so he was very happy!

Verrocchio's workshop was like a small factory and lots of people worked there. The workshop made many different things like beautiful paintings and sculptures and clothes for important days of the year. Leonardo probably started with small jobs like making paint or cleaning the workshop. Later he learned to draw, work with stones, design clothes, and do many other things. The apprentices living above Verrocchio's workshop ate, laughed, and played music together. The boys became great friends. It was like a new family. Before long, he was helping Verrocchio to finish his important paintings, for he was a fast learner. He soon became a talented painter.

At the time Italy was made of lots of different small countries. Florence was the biggest city of one of these countries. It was also one of the biggest and richest cities in Europe. People were building churches and great houses all over the city and they needed paintings and sculptures to put in them. Florence in the 1460s was a great place for talented people and nobody was more talented than Leonardo. It was a time of new ideas about painting, science, and many other things. Today we call this time the Renaissance.
